LiveGood Whipped Tallow Balm: How to Use It, Ingredients & Common Questions

LiveGood: Skin & Beauty · https://coachluke.com/docs/livegood-whipped-tallow-balm-how-to-use-it-ingredients-common-questions/

Quick reference for LiveGood Whipped Tallow Balm. The full review covers the complete ingredient list and the details in depth.

How do I use it?

LiveGood's directions: on clean skin, massage the balm in. Start small, because a little goes a long way. It can be used on the face, body, lips and even hair ends. The label itself simply says to apply as needed.

What's in it?

Just three ingredients: grass-fed and grass-finished beef tallow (suet), organic jojoba seed oil and organic cocoa seed butter. It has no water, fragrance or preservatives, and LiveGood's badges include cruelty-free, gluten-free, soy-free, non-GMO, pasture-raised, paraben-free and made in the USA. It is not vegan.

Does it smell like beef?

Well-rendered tallow has only a faint, natural scent that fades after application, and the cocoa butter adds a soft note. There is no added fragrance.

How should I store it?

With no preservative, keep the jar dry and clean: use clean, dry fingers, keep the lid closed and store it away from heat so the whipped texture holds.

What does it cost?

Members pay $14.20 a jar on Subscribe and Save or $14.95 one time; retail is $29.95. LiveGood's product page does not list the jar size.

Who should patch test or check with a doctor first?

Patch test on your inner arm for 24 to 48 hours before facial use, especially if you are acne-prone; start with a thin layer at night. If you have a red-meat allergy such as alpha-gal syndrome, ask your doctor first. For eczema, psoriasis or any skin condition, see a dermatologist rather than relying on a balm.

How long until I notice anything?

Softness is noticeable right away. Rough, dry patches usually improve in feel over several days to a few weeks of regular use. Results vary.

What if it doesn't work for me?
